Efforts Rushed To Clear Bugs From 2nd Stage

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla., Dec. 2 (A)-Trouble was reported to have developed today in the second stage "brain" of the Vanguard rocket being readied for an attempt to propel an American baby moon into space.

An informed U. S. Navy source said American technicians are working around the clock to clear the bugs out of the second stage which houses the control and guidance systems of the 72-foot rocket. This stage has not been tested previously.

He described the trouble only as static in the electronic system. Unless eliminated, he said, this could cause the rocket to wobble in flight and force its destruction. No Certainty Of Orbit

The only 1958 car that offers more of everything you want... yet is priced lower than in 57

Here's great news! While prices of 1958 cars of other manufacturers are up, the price of Ford's exciting new Custom 300 Series is down. In fact, a brand-new 58 Ford Custom 300 with all of its exciting new styling and engineering advances is priced lower than a '57 model, similarly equipped! But there is much more than low price to Ford's value story.

World approved styling. A Custom 300 brings you styling that is dramatically new. With its Honeycombed grille. Slipstream roof, Deep-Sculptured rear deck, Power-Flow hood and Safety-Twin headlights and taillights, Ford styling drew admiring glances all the way from Paris to Saigon . . . vet it's yours now in any Custom 300 without extra cost!

New handling ease. Slide behind the wheel of a best thing to power steering.

New riding comfort. Notice, too, the solid comfort of your softer, smoother ride. That's Ford's easier acting front and rear suspensions. They soak up the bumps before they reach you. And you'll ride in luxury with Ford's beautiful new deep-dimension interiors!

Thrifty, new engines. You have a wonderful choice of new power plants, designed for real gas-saving economy plus greater performance. Six or V-8, they give you more power, smoother power, from less gast

A Masterpiece ... Even by Cadillac Standards!

The Cadillac car for 1958 is, clearly, a masterpiece in all the things that make a Cadillac . . . a Cadillac!

Certainly, it has had no adequate precedent insofar as beauty and majesty are concerned. In its graceful symmetry of line, in its tasteful use of chrome and color, and in its remarkable look of stature and substance, it is in a class all of its own.

Unquestionably, it is without counterpart by the way of interior elegance. Never before have Fleetwood coachcrafters combined such graciousness and luxury in a single interior design.

And, most assuredly, it has set its own pace in modern motor car performance. Its dynamic new engine, its more responsive transmission, its improved power steering and its new air suspension, now available as an extra-cost option, are simply a revelation.

In the way it looks, in the way it rides, and in the way it drivesthis is Cadillac's finest!

We earnestly hope that you will take the time to investigate all three aspects of this magnificent new Cadillac very soon.

Your Cadillac dealer will be delighted to give you full details on Cadillac's twelve new models, including the incomparable Eldorado Brougham. You will be most welcome at any time.

Federal Mania For Secrecy

"When secrecy is extended to dinner meetings at which government officials are enabled to make remarks for which they are not publicly accountable, the argument for secrecy becomes

With this remark, Representative Moss, the Californian who at times wages a lonely battle against government secrecy, answered a government official who had condemned an American magazine as "rendering a great disservice to the nation" because of an article it printed relative to the rocket-missile fiasco.

Aviation Week has revealed that this country was tracking Russian missile tests through a radar station in Turkey. The article further stated that Russia was aware of the radar trackings and the only people kept in ignorance of the operation by government were the citizens of the United States. The official who made the "disservice to the nation" remark to a private dinner meeting of 200 of the members of the Business Advisory Council was Robert Cutler, the President's representative on the National Security Council. Cutler coupled his aforementioned remark with a suggestion, if not an outright admonition, that his business audience "take the journal's alleged disservice into consideration when they place their advertising.'

National security precautions are one thing, and dictatorial secrecy is another. This is not the first instance, nor will it be the last, of a U.S. military operation known only to the enemy. Cutler's remarks only compound the error. Nor can lifting of the secrecy tag from many routine matters be expected to come from the government bureaus. At a recent Congressional hearing, not one of many department and bureau heads who testified concerning existing classification procedures saw any need for revising them. It is obvious that the arrogant attitude on the part of the Executive Branch can be overcome only by Congressional action.

The Vice President

Constitutionally, the Vice President has two functions only: 1. To preside over the Senate; 2. To be on hand should the President die or become disabled to take over so that the Administration will be continued ntil the next election. Apart from these two functions, the Constitution gives the Vice President no duties, obligations, authorities or responsibilities.

James Roosevelt is quite correct when he suggests that Congress should do something about the word, "disability," which throughout the existence of our nation, has not been defined. James Roosevelt should know from experience what danger the country can be in when a President suffers from severe ailments during his incumbency, as his father did in his third term. It is now clear that Franklin D. Roosevelt was not altogether himself at Yalta. It is clear that he was not physically fit to run for a fourth term. It is clear that he should not have run for a third term.

At any rate, one can, if he is so minded, rationalize Mr. Roosevelt's conduct as a desire to prevent Henry Wallace from becoming President constitutionally. Instead Harry Truman got it although he had not been permitted to learn the job and had to begin from scratch at one of the most difficult moment in modern history. He went to Potsdam to face an aging but still wily Stalin who, as a confirmed atheist, and a renegade student for the priesthood, must have wondered why the God of Christians gave him such a break. No country has yet dared to publish the Potsdam papers.

Richard Dixon is not so ill-prepared to assume whatever responsibilities he may constitutionally. There being no provision for an acting President, his signature on a document can have no legality. He may be deputized by the President to perform some functions, but he has no legal authority to act.

In the case of Woodrow Wilson, the conduct of the Presidency during his final illness was utterly illegal and dishonorable. A White House cabal operated the Presidency and acted in the President's name, even signing documents, not a one of which could stand a challenge of its legality even if the President's hand was held to a pen. Only history will fully disclose what mischief may have been done.

In the case of Franklin D. Roosevelt, he functioned arbitrarily to the very end and apparently was able to perform his tasks. His illness was becoming more obvious during the fourth term campaign. I shall never forget his parade through Harlem in an open automobile in a pelting rain. After that he was taken to the Waldorf-Astoria to change his clothes, drink some martinis and attend a huge dinner at which he spoke. I listened to that speech over the radio. At one point his voice grew husky, off pitch, and his words were slurred in a shaking manner. He quickly recovered.

The response was: "What a wonderful man! What a marvelous physique!" The truth was that he was a very sick man, actually dying by those slow processes which often pass unnoticed in a man of Mr. Roosevelt's herculean activities.

Vice President Nixon is behaving constitutionally. He is not forcing himself upon the President. He is not expanding his legal authority. Whatever the President has asked him to do, he does. The country will not accept Sherman Adams as an acting President; therefore Nixon must step in quickly.

When Senator Styles Bridges, senior among Republicans, suggested that the Vice President be given ertain authorities if and while the President was disabled, he was not rushing in too hurriedly as a naive television commentator suggested but he was notifying Sherman Adams in utterly understandable language that the Republicans in Congress will not accept the White House Chief-of-Staff as an acting President. Congress needs to define the word, "disability," in language which leaves no doubts, because Presidents are human and anything can happen to them, and much has. Congressional action may be open to question as applying to this term in office of the President or Vice President, but legislation should be passed while the perils of being a human are fresh in the people's memory. As our Constitution is written, the President's powers and functions are too great, too concentrated and too numerous to permit of ordinary human frailties. There is no provision for a regency.

Has Vice President Nixon 'Matured' Politically?

time for a good look at Richard Nixon, plus and minus. Consider the plus first. Every one is repeating hopefully that Nixon has "matured," without exactly spelling out what the word means. The best way to understand what the word means is to examine Nixon's role in the first year of the second istration. So this seems a good

Eisenhower administration. For the part Nixon has played the Administration is highly significant for the future. Every one knows that Nixon was the first to recognize the full meaning of the Sputniks, while leading Administration figures were smugly dismissing the first Sputnik as a "neat scientific trick," "bauble," or a "basketball." Every one knows that since the Sputnik launchings Nixon has repeatedly and fervently demanded an effective response to the Soviet challenge, in the economic as well as the military field. What is not well known is that this position of Nixon's is not simply a good politician's instinctive response to the drama of the Sputniks. It is, on the contrary, absolutely consistant with the position Nixon consistently took months before the Sputniks roared into space. A good deal that seems mysterious in retrospect about the Eisenhower administration's backings and fillings in the pre-Sputnik era is explained by one simple fact. The ruling faction in the Administration, led by Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams, was determined to offer the voters a nice big shiny tax cut in the election year of 1958. The target was a tax reduction dictated the defense cutbacks and the arbitrary ceilings on defense spending, which in the post-Sputnik era have left the Administration wide open to withering criticism. And it is most significant that Nixon's was just about the only influential voice raised Administration's inner councils, against giving a tax cut first priority.

Tax - cutting, he repeatedly pointed out, was no political try in the missile race. But so magic formula. To prove his did the members of the tax cut point, he cited the 1954 elections, in which the voters rewarded the Republican administration for the biggest tax cut in history by electing solid Democratic majorities to both houses.

The real strength of the Eisenhower administration, Nixon consistently argued, lay in the voters' sense of confidence in the Presidents handling of defense and foreign policy. To give a tax cut priority over defense might destroy that sense of confidence, and thus the greatest Republican

Nixon of course had access to the intelligence reports showing the Soviets far ahead of this coun-

But he had found out different.

Fight Goes On

On the third fall, the managers had known the history of strokes, known the likelihood of recurrence when a champ is old, when he's under stress and strain, when he has to sweat over tough decisions. But the managers threw water in his face, massaged the muscles, told him to get back in there and fight just the same. Jim Hagerty knew all too well how difficult it was to get the Champ to tackle major problems. He'd been with him at Newport when the Champ didn't want to tackle Little Rock, almost had to be hauled off the golf course to tackle it. . . . Jim will deny this, of course. And he has the megaphone. But it's true.

The managers also knew how the Champ was finding it difficult to concentrate. They knew the medical history of older people when less blood flows to the brain; how their mental functions decline, how it's difficult for an older man to make decisions under stress and strain which is why the military service insists on retiring men shortly The managers knew how the Champ wanted all reports brought him in capsule form, how he seldom wanted to study problems more than 20 or 30 minutes. . . They knew too of the testimony of Dr. John W. Gofman, the University of California specialist: "Arteriosclerosis of the brain, that is, narrowing of the blood vessels of the brain, is definitely related to arteriosclerosis of the heart. When the blood vessels of the heart are narrowed, so on the average are the blood vessels of the brain. This takes an enormous toll of lives, and more than that it affects usefulness. It is not only a problem in that its victims occupy our mental hospitals in older age, but of much more vast importance is the loss of effectiveness due to diminishing blood supply to the brain in large numbers of crucial individuals in their most effective

Champ Turns Cheek

Finally, the Champ's managers knew how distressed he had been over the headaches and heartaches of the past year - over Little Rock, the missile failures, and the bickering inside his own He had been accustomed to tough body-blows in wartime, but he writhed in surprise and inward hurt when his good friend and Secretary of the Treasury, George Humphrey, publicly lambasted his budget. An attack on the budget by a member of the Cabinet was unprecedented. It had never happened before in history. But the Champ didn't fire his critic, as his predecessors would have done. He went instead to visit at Humphrey's Georgia plantation, thereby adding to the budget confusion in Washington. There was more confusion when the Secretary of Commerce publicly blasted wage and price controls one day after the Champ had OK'd wage and price controls to stop inflation. licly slapping the Champ now seemed to be contagious.

Charlie Wilson was the next to slap back when he and the Champ differed over federalizing the National Guard. Charlie, visiting the White House, told newsmen: "This isn't my dunghill."

The newsmen had to clean up his remark. Wilson slapped the Champ hard as only a woman can slap and get away with it. She was rewarded by a special trip south in the Champ's private plane. These things were not what the managers promised the Champ when they urged him, after two bad spills, to stay on in the ring; when they told him they would handle things for him, not to He did worry. He especially worried over the missile-satellite failures. And this contributed to his third fall. But, once again the managers rushed in with the bucket of water, the quick massage, the megaphone, Hagerty telling the public everything was fine. And, for better or for worse, once again the Champ fought on.

Notes From Vienna

By Bob Considine

NEW YORK, Dec. 2-(INS)-This is from notes taken as Bill Hearst called on ailing Chancellor Raab and frisky two-fisted Foreign Minister Figl in Vienna

The pull-out of the Red Army

flat on its back.

'Since the Americans primed

"We had a hard time for so many years," the vigorous and valorous little man with the red toothbrush mustache said. "In 1918 our empire was broken up. All we got was a few mountains and vales and the big city of Vienna. All the proconsuls we had sent out through the generations came home, and there were no jobs for them. But we were determined to live. We were just coming up for air when Hitler took us and everything we had

"Then we got the Russians at

"I don't know what we would have done without Gen. Mark Clark. A great American, great military man and great political figure. Without Clark, my friend, we couldn't have existed in 1945 and 1946. He had incredible confidence in me, a young chancellor then. Under his wing, he led us out of the shadows. He used his great influence to get me admitted to the daily meetings with the other Allied commissioners, shared his trust in me with them, maintained our sovereignty over the land, hammered away and got free elections, found a way around what would have been Russia's veto power over whatever we and the friendly commissioners might want. What a from Austria, which must be noted historically as one of the few back-offs the Russians have made since they began to feel their oats, took on its first substance in the talks the Pulitzerprize-winning team of Hearst-Smith-Conniff had with the Kremlin brass in February, 1955.

Visiting Vienna with any member of that group is something like walking into Yankee Stadium with Babe Ruth was in the old days. Raab and Figl abound with something we saw nowhere during our 15,000-mile trip, an open and frank gratitude for what America, its people and these reporters did for it when it was the pump, after arranging for us to be free again, we have never had it so good," Figl told Hearst in an office not far from the room where Vienna Congress was held in the wake of Napoleon's downfall.

Figl is justly proud of the fact that a U. S. Senate committee went on record as saying, in effect, "Of all the countries which received Marshall Plan aid, Austria accomplished the most." He recalled, too, a nervous moment with former President Herbert Hoover, who visited Austria in 1946 for two reasons: to pick up a degree which had been given him just before Hitler took over the country, and to report on whether Austria needed American aid.

"At lunch I served him wiener schnitzel, a good wine and sweets," Figl told Bill. "Then to my alarm Mr. Hoover said, 'This was a wonderful meal. It doesn't look as if you need much help over here.' I told him the truth. I told him 'Mark Clark gave me this so I could feed you, Mr. Hoover.' Well, we got the help, for which we will always bless your name. I once thought that the greatest day of my life was the day I signed the Marshall Plan papers that would provide that help for my country. But I knew an even greater day, the day I was able to tell Washington that we needed no more."

The efficient and hospitable Austrian press aide, Fritz Reznik, took us then into the high paneled office of Austria's ailing Chancellor Raab.

"The Russians retreated from Austria as a result of your talks with Khrushchev and the others,' he told Hearst. "Argue as you will, that's the fact. Their policy changed from your talks."

The chancellor said that his administration has just about finished the reconstruction of bombed-out Vienna. "The American bombs had their use,' the distinguished looking man said. "They eliminated a lot of our drabbest buildings. There was not too much incentive to rebuild before the Russians left. While they were here you could be certain of only one thing about them: they would let us restore a build ing or erect a new one from the ground up-and then they would take it.

But Fletcher was not the originator of the idea. According to Nutrition Reviews, British Prime Minister Gladstone attributed his success in life to his rule of giving every tooth a chance to bite into every morsel he swallowed. cotton bags containing chewed and unchewed food and the residues were studied for the amounts digested.

When roast or fried beef was used, 76 per cent of the chewed parts was completely digested in contrast to 37 per cent of the unchewed. The same occurred to boiled potatoes, peas, and carrots. On the other hand, chewing had no effect upon the quantity of residue of roast chicken, stewed lamb, fried and boiled fish, hard boiled eggs, boiled rice, white bread, and cheese,

Studies on three individuals demonstrated that the person with only a few teeth does as good a job of chewing as others with perfect teeth. When lean beef was pounded with a spiked hammer and treated with a proteolytic enzyme, the amount digested was increased even though unchewed. This did not occur when the meat was pounded and tenderized after frying.

Elk Garden Visits Piedmont; Bobcats Invade Waynesburg

The 17-school Potomac Valley Conference will open its twentyfirst basketball season tonight with four of the teams slated to see action in contests scheduled for Ridgeley and Piedmont.

Coach Malcolm Norwood's West Virginia School for the Deaf, champions of 1956-57, with a 9-1 record, and an overall mark of 21 victories in 23 outings last year, kick off the lid at Ridgeley tonight but such familiar faces Charley Buemi and Gene Smith, who rang up 460 points between them last year in the P. V. C. and a total of 877 points for the entire campaign, will be missing from the Lions' lineup as will several other members of that powerhouse.

Tommy O'Connor's took over the reins at Ridgeley last season and his first team turned in 12 wins against 11 loses. The Blackhawks won eight and lost six in the P. V. C.

Coach William "Huck" Miers' Piedmont High Llons, who bagged the P. V. C. crown three times in the last five years, play host to Paul Kalbaugh's Elk Garden High School Elks tonight in the season opener for both quints. Defendant Claims Temporary Insanity

TOWSON, Md., Dec. 2 (P-Mrs Robert J. Van Horn, socially prominent and independently wealthy, was "terribly, horribly beaten" to death, it was testified today at the trial of her 53-yearold husband for her murder.

Capt. Elmer F. Adams, chief Baltimore County detective, read a statement he said was given by Van Horn in which the defendant admitted murdering his wife in "the only red rage I remember having Dr. William V. Lovitt Jr., assistant state medical examiner, said the 54-year-old woman had two long cuts on her forehead which penetrated to her skull. She also suffered a broken spinal cord and numerous cuts and bruises before dying June 1.

Van Horn, who married her two years before, was named chief beneficiary of her estate which Prosecutor Frank H. Newell III said now exceeds $800,000.

Van Horn has pleaded innocent to the murder charge on a claim he was insane at the time. Claims Willful Act

Newell, in his opening statement to three judges hearing the case without a jury, said Van Horn committed the murder "willfully, well knowing the nature and quality of his act.

The prosecutor claimed that the lumber company executive "brutally and maliciously murdered' his wife in an assault from the front steps of their suburban home to a tree 39 feet away. The state claims Van Horn then put his wife's body in a station wagon and drove to an unfinished road

Police Officer Edward Schaffer told of coming on Van Horn sitting in the parked station wagon.

The patrolman said Van Horn told him he "had decided to commit suicide. I pleaded with him to forget the idea. Mr. Van Horn replied that it was hopeless to get him to change his mind and he asked me to look over the bank and I would find the body of his
